De Soto was an unworthy human of the Sun god. As he and his men invaded my village, he took from us precious jewels, gold, beads, silver, and sacred statues.

He killed so many people of my village that we were forced to attack.

As the man with four legs approached my village, we were all in shock. As he came faster towards the village he held up a mighty piece of steel and yelled a war cry.

When he entered the village he began to kill and steal. His men did the same. He hunted us as if we were wild deer during hunting season. The lucky ones were the ones who died a fast death unlike me. I am held captive against my will to work as a slave.
