Memoir

I remember a time that we always went outside every day. The whole class had fun but there was this one kid. This kid was not athletic and was kind of a pain to play with. That is one reason why no one wanted on our team. I always felt bad for the kid and I wanted to pick him early in our selection, but I never was the captain. I did not just let him feel bad I tried to get him involved but it did not help him. Every time I got him involved he always messed up and the other kids started laughing at him. It got so bad that no one wanted him on their team. I tried to stop playing the games and try to make him feel happy.

Every time I talked to him, my friends started laughing at me. I always try talking to him without getting too much attention. At the end of the school year we were all excited for the summer. we were all playing football except that kid he was crying.

I stop running to talk to the that was crying and asked him "why are you crying?" He explain that he was pick last and that he was tired of getting picked last. I knew I had to do something so I stop the game to tell the kids playing something. I told every one that a kid is crying because he does not get pick early.

I asked them what is the best way to fix it .One kids suggested that we should pick team all over again and pick him first. Now that Every on was on the same page all we had to do was to get him to play football after he gave up on it. We all tried to get the kid to come over but he kept on crying. So we told him that we are going to pick teams more fairly and that we all have a chance to play .After thinking about it he finally come over to pick teams. After getting teams captains we started picking teams and the kid was picked first and the smile on his face light up the world. After that we had no problems and kids that felt left out ever again.

Resolution

Two months later Lucas saw Cole sitting alone at recess and he talked to him and asked him if he wanted to play. Cole thought he was just going to exclude him again but he told him, "I'm sorry if I ever excluded you." Cole knew Lucas was serious this time because Lucas was being nice. Lucas got first pick as captain he picked Cole first he was so happy everyone booed Cole and Lucas told them that Cole was the best player because he was smart. They had so much fun we went inside and Cole and Lucas started to become great friends.
